Gentlemen:

My father at the time of his death a few months ago had in his possession a number of coins which are now to be disposed of in order to settle the estate. The coins to be disposed of are at the present moment not available for examination and I am enclosing a list of them.

If any of the members of your society are interested in the purchase of any of these will you kindly have them indicate their wishes in accordance with the enclosed list, also the amount they feel they would care to pay for any or all of them. In that case I can arrange to have the coins shipped to me so that those interested can examine them at some convenient time.

There are also a number of large pieces presumably silver with either Latin or Italian inscriptions on them but no monetary value given. Some of them date back to the year 1600. Whether they are medallions or whether they were used as money I do not know. These latter pieces I can have shipped to me at any time so that any one who is interested can examine them.

Thanking you very much for your interest in this matter, I am

RD:VS.

Very truly yours,

Dear Sir:

In response to your letter of February 7th, I would say that our Society is not constituted to offer coins to its members as we are a Museum and have no regular meetings.

Your father apparently had a number of very good pieces provided they are in good condition. I think you would find it more practical to sell these as a whole rather than singly, and would suggest your writing to Wayte Raymond, 489 Park Avenue, Gutttag Bros. 16 Exchange Place, and the Elder Coin & Curio Co., 9 East 35th Street, all of this city. The last named holds auction sales of coins. But I doubt if you could do business with any of these people unless they are able to see the coins, as condition and minor die varieties play a very important part.

Very truly yours,

Curator
